Behind the lens

Whether you're a cottager, a full-time resident or a visitor to the Highlands, you are surrounded by glorious opportunities to make outstanding photographs. These are memories of people, places and events to share with others, to display, or for your own enjoyment.

Photography is a pastime that can be enjoyed by young and old alike. The incredible growth of digital photography has put a camera in virtually everyone's hands: from a cellphone to a DSLR, everyone has the ability to make exceptional photos. This series of articles look at ways to make your images more compelling.

In this column, we look at some tips and techniques that you can use to improve your photos. We try to include tips that can be used by everyone, regardless of what kind of camera you have, and some for the more advanced user.

What do you do when it's a rainy, cold, damp, miserable day? The obvious choice is to throw another log on the fire, pour a fresh cuppa, find a good book to read and put your feet up. I did that. Then I got bored. And I thought, "I bet the streets are shiny wet" so I did what any real photographer would do: I went out in the rain (it was in the middle of the Christmas thaw).

Considering that it's January when you're reading this, I should change the word "rain" to "snow" or "cold" or "wind" or… but to paraphrase other photographers, "if you shoot pictures in ordinary conditions, you'll get ordinary pictures"! So get adven-

Shooting in the rain

We live up here. We're Canadians. We go out in all kinds of weather. You know how to do it: you dress for it. And after you come back and have a cup of hot chocolate and laugh at the ones who were afraid to go out in a little weather. I was going to say, "just do it" but I can't because that's somebody's tag line.

Are you worried about your camera gear? It's probably not waterproof but a little rain or snow isn't going to hurt it. Dry it off gently when you get home and watch out for condensation but it'll be fine! I wrote a whole eBook on shooting in the winter and you can have it for free by going here: www.photography.to/subscribe.htm (that subscribes you to my blog and gets you a free eBook).

So let me finish my story…

I drove into Minden, filled up with gas (amazing, 85.9¢/L after my discount!) bought some groceries (prime rib roasts on sale! Yay!) and meandered down to Bobcaygeon Road in Minden. Downtown. The main street. OK, it's really the ONLY street... I parked, looked for a likely spot, took a few test shots for exposure, then waited for someone interesting to come along.

There were only a few people out but I wasn't ready to give up. A soggy half hour later, I was rewarded. Along came this red and white umbrella person!

I've had this shot in mind for some time. I knew that what I wanted to do was to mask out the subject, then apply a motion blur to the background. Others have used this technique in posted pictures of wanderers in the rain-soaked narrow cobblestoned streets of exotic locations, but here I was in "picturesque" downtown Minden! I wiped the raindrops off the front of my lens and took a few shots.

When I got home I did some technical Photoshop stuff to them. You don't have to be a Photoshop Nerd to get good pictures, but you can really soup them up if you are! Contact me at photography@faczen.com to learn how.

On the way home, I stopped in the Canadian Tire parking lot, figuring the lights from inside the store would add an interesting element to a similar shot. I didn't like any of those, but then behind me, these two girls appeared. Got it!

Now get out of that chair. Get dressed and go out and take some pictures. I'll meet you out there!

2015: A new year of travel

Linda Coneybeare
Travel Plus

Hello, and welcome to 2015. Where to go, where to avoid in 2015

One of the biggest recent news events that will impact travel in 2015 is the end of the U.S. embargo against Cuba. Cuba has been such a unique destination to us here in Canada, and the Cubans love us. Cuba has never banned the entry of Americans to their country, but the American tourists who fly out of our airports to holiday there have had some explaining to do when they got home with a Cuban entry and exit stamp in their passports

Well, no longer, as at some point there will be direct flights from the U.S.A to Cuban tourist destinations.

I must confess, I enjoy going to a country where there is no McDonalds, KFC, Taco Bell, etc., and this will change. Machenzie and I have already seen a spike in sales to Cuba as our clients decide to enjoy this country and its unique culture before it gets "Americanized"

Another destination that we see as very popular is Roatan. Many dates in February/March are already sold out. This island, off the coast of Honduras is home to one of the best dive and snorkelling reefs in the world. Although the hotels are not glamorous, without the many a la carte restaurants as you would see in the Mayan Riveria or Punta Cana, it is a quaint and charming destination.

In November (the week we had the huge snow storm) I was in Mexico attending a Transat conference. The hotel where I stayed and the conferences held at was the beautiful Moon Palace, located just 10 miles from Cancun Airport. Although the meetings prevented me from having any beach time, it sure was a beautiful resort. I also visited a few other resorts nearby, including the stunning Paradisus Cancun. It is a real plus to have these great resorts so close to the airport, without the long (sometimes over two hours) transfer time to the Tulum and Akumal resorts farther down the Mayan Riviera coast.

River cruising continues to be a top seller here at Travelplus, and with a capacity of on average 130 passengers, these cruise lines sell out quickly. New destinations are being offered with River Cruise Lines including India with Uniworld, and Africa with AMA Waterway

Transat's Europe 2015 brochure is now available and I am so pleased to see that new in 2015 , Transat will be offering direct flights to Budapest, Hungary. This is one of the most beautiful cities I have ever seen, and when you combine this flight with their Prague flights it means that you can fly into one of these two cities, and home from the other. Perhaps include Vienna as part of your itinerary, and see the "Triple Crowns of Central Europe."

Where to avoid? Although my love of travel makes it hard to say don't go there, I really would have to say stay away from North Korea. It is an extremely difficult country to be allowed into and heavily censored, so you would only be seeing what the state run tourist board would want you to see, which isn't the reality of this country run by a bizarre dictator.

Because my son in law was born in South Korea, I do hope to go there one day, and to the DMZ and look over to North Korea, but no further!

Whether it is your hope to experience the unique charm of Cuba, or the spectacular experience of a river cruise, Machenzie and I will be able to help you get there

How to break New Year's resolutions

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

As you read this, New Year's Day probably still looms large in the rearview mirror. At best, it's probably only been a few days since you made all those resolutions too.

Perfect! That means there are probably a couple you haven't got around to breaking yet. They are very likely the ones you bragged to everyone about; the ones you swore you'd do to the bitter end.

Well, it's been a few days. Here's how you break them.

1. Link it to climate change: Here's an example. "Sure, I was going to jog every day, but then I realized this excess activity would mean I'd be putting more carbon dioxide into the environment…"
2. Link it to the welfare of others: Example: "I was going to lose weight but then I thought, 'I don't want younger people to buy into this unrealistic body image thing'."
3. Link it to economic prosperity: "I know I said I'd reduce my drinking, but then I thought the people at the LCBO need to work too."
4. Link it to the welfare of the community you live in: "Yes, I said I'd walk to work every day, but honestly, that's a lot of wear and tear on our sidewalks – and we pay enough in municipal taxes already, right?"
5. Link it to humility: "I know I was going to read one classic novel a week, but then I decided, who am I to be so intellectual?"
6. Fake amnesia: Whenever anyone reminds you of a resolution you are breaking say, "I said what?" Then ask them who they are.
7. Tell them about the expiry date: Whenever anyone reminds you of a resolution you have broken say, "Oh, there was an expiry date on that one."
8. Explain you misunderstood the concept. Example: "When I agreed to stop smoking, I meant stop smoking fish…What a mix up, huh?"
9. Link it to willpower. All you need to do is say, "Yeah, I'd really like to stop doing that, but I've got no willpower. Next year, I am going to resolve to get some."
10. Give them away: They say it is better to give than receive, so why not give away your resolutions to someone who actually might stand a chance of keeping them? That way, at least they'll get done.

Health unit annual report highlights role of public health in communities

Have you ever wondered what type of work public health does in your community?

Through its newly released 2013 Annual Report (http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=iz3nipZbWb4), the Haliburton, Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit is providing an answer to that question.

Produced in-house, the report is a 10-minute video that not only highlights the organization's accomplishments in 2013, but also features a number of health unit staff talking about their work in the community and the importance of public health.

"Public health plays a vital role in the health and well-being of the residents of our communities, but because a lot of our work focuses on prevention, people may be unaware of what we do," says medical officer of health Dr. Lynn Noseworthy.

The health unit is required to provide the public with information about the work it accomplishes. Rather than provide just a written account of the data, Dr. Noseworthy says the health unit aims to provide the information in a format that will be more interesting and engaging to residents so that more people may take the time to watch and learn more about the organization's programs and services. Including staff in this year's video also enables the health unit to showcase a small sample of the exceptional people who work with the organization and feel passionate about helping others in the communities they serve, she says.

"Our people are truly the strength of our organization," Dr. Noseworthy says. "We have a number of exceptional professionals who are dedicated to providing the best programs and services possible to help keep our residents healthy."

The video can be viewed through the health unit's website at www.hkpr.on.ca or through the health unit's YouTube Channel (HKPRDHU).

Wheelbarrow of Wine

The Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary's second Wheelbarrow of Wine fundraiser came to a close on Dec. 7. The winners were Peter and Lindsay Wilcox of Lipsy Lake who were happy to take home 41 bottles of wine plus the wheelbarrow. The members of the auxiliary donated the wine and Emmerson Lumber donated the wheelbarrow. They bought their winning ticket from auxiliary member and aunt Wendy Vermeersch. Lindsay said it was the first time she had ever won anything.

This event raised over $4,500 which will be used to purchase equipment for the hospital. The auxiliary thanks all those who purchased tickets and made this fundraiser such a success.

OPP investigating residential break in

On December 29, 2014 the Ontario Provincial Police attended a seasonal residence on Taylor Road in response to a break, enter and theft complaint.

Upon arrival on scene the officer noted damage done to the sliding glass door. Stolen from the residence was a 42" Sony flat screen television.

OPP investigating theft of motor vehicle

The Ontario Provincial Police (OPP) is currently investigating the theft of a motor vehicle from the Minden Hills area.

On December 30, 2014 an OPP officer attended a residence on Hunter Creek in response to the theft of a 2012 Toyota Tundra pickup truck, blue, with Ontario marker MS7 725. The vehicle was stolen from an unlocked garage. Also stolen from the garage was a Stihl chainsaw.

A Scenes of Crime Officer (SOCO) attended the residence to assist with the investigation.

OPP investigating attempted theft

On December 30, 2014 officers from the Haliburton Highlands detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police responded to a call involving a break, enter and attempted theft at the Valu Mart in Minden.

Initial investigation revealed that sometime between 8 and 8:30 a.m. a suspect entered a locked portion of the building by removing a window pane. The suspect removed several items from the area, including a President's Choice jacket, but was unable to get into the safe.

The OPP is currently looking for a male party in his 20s, 5'8" to 5'10", with a shaved head. He was last observed wearing checkered black pajama pants and a black jacket.

A Scenes of Crime Officer (SOCO) attended the location to assist with the investigation.
